What about Trump's Mail-in Voting Executive Order?

- The US Constitution is clear: state governments – not the President – have the power to run our elections. In March, Trump issued an Executive Order attempting to make mail-in voting more difficult, including instructing the US Postal Service to refuse to mail ballots for certain voters.
- The US Supreme Court has blocked the Executive Order from taking effect for the November 2026 midterms election. The Executive Order is not and cannot go into effect anywhere.
