Poem

The daily coracle

she's almost over
the depression
it's just
every morning
she wakes
in a noxious puddle
of bilge water
at the bottom of
her tiny coracle

she has to try to
rinse herself
free of its oily grip
before she can
bright-face the day

Gina Mercer

Hobart, TAS.

ginamercer@netspace.net.au

doi: 10.5694/mja15.01087