

ON TEXAS' VOTER SUSPENSE LIST?

You can still vote!

1.8 million Texas voters have been placed on the suspense list.

If you are on the suspense list, you're not alone. You are still registered and eligible to vote in the upcoming election.

What is the Suspense List?

- A voter is placed on the suspense list if a county's elections department cannot confirm the voter's address listed on their registration.
- Being on the list does NOT mean you are no longer registered or ineligible to vote.

How do I vote if I'm on the Suspense List?

To vote, ask for a Statement of Residence Form at your polling place.

- If you live in the same county where you previously registered: you will be able to vote on a regular ballot.
- If you live in a different county than where you previously registered: you must vote during early voting, which runs from October 19 - October 30. Go to your main early voting site in your new county, fill out a Statement of Residence Form, and you will be allowed to vote on a limited ballot only. Limited ballots include all statewide races, and any district offices that overlap between your old and new address. You can find out what your main early voting site is by calling your county elections office.

What Should I Do Now?

The deadline to update your address with the elections office has passed for 2026, but you can likely still vote by confirming your address when you go to your correct polling place.

Don't wait. Check your Voter Status.

If you are on the Suspense List, make a plan to vote early or on Election Day.
