

Here's What We'll Be Featuring

Please review the list of stories we plan to feature in this issue below. If your organization has a story to share that fits into one of the article ideas listed here, or photos to share, please email TVPPA Publications and Content Manager, Dawn Sloan-Downes to schedule a time to talk or you can submit your idea or photo using this form. If you're submitting a photo, be sure to include a one or two sentence caption describing it.

- Public Power Heroes: Every day, the people of public power show courage, dedication, and a deep commitment to their communities. This feature will spotlight those who have gone above and beyond, even in a field where “above and beyond” is part of the job. We’re looking for stories of employees whose extraordinary actions — acts of bravery, lifesaving response, or exceptional service — embody the true spirit of public power.
- Community at the Core: This story will focus on the myriad of ways community is at the core of much of the work local power companies do, from supporting economic development, providing financial and technical support for STEM and other educational programs in local schools, launching workforce pipelines that prepare local students for utility-sector jobs, partnering with food banks, housing programs and other relief efforts that strengthen the fabric of the communities they serve.
- More than Electricity - The Many Facets of Public Power: This photo* essay will showcase the many ways local power companies engage and empower their communities. We’re looking for images that capture the full spectrum of your impact including new infrastructure projects, storm or disaster recovery, community events, local residents, and the employees who make it all possible. Share the photos that best represent how your LPC shows up for the people you serve.

Please submit your story ideas and/or photos using the form linked above by October 13. And be sure to review the technical requirements for photograph submissions below.
